Ethics : A way of life

I would love to. However, this equation looks quite tricky. Let's take Jai's help.

That's a good idea. He is the most accomplished student in our class.

But he always stays aloof in the school.

Hi Jai! How are you? We need, your help.

Sorry I am busy.

You please ask someone else.

He is so arrogant.
It is worthless
talking to him.

Jai fell ill all of a sudden and could not attend school for one week.

After a week

Hi Meera!
How are you? I need a small favor from you.

Hi Jai! I am
good. Let me know what you need.

I couldn't attend school due to illness.

Next morning in the classroom.

I have an important information to share with you all.

We will be organizing a school event where every student is required to submit a science project in two weeks.

For this event the entire class will be divided into groups of three. Each group will have a leader from among themselves.

The teacher divided the class into teams of three and Jai was made the leader of his team which included Ruchi and Chander.

I am the leader of the group.

I can accomplish this project completely by myself and I don't need Ruchi or Chander.

Jai was still not reaching out to them. Finally, Ruchi decided to do something about it.

That evening, as Jai was leaving school, he saw Munni and her team discussing.

It's great that our team received such wonderful appreciation. We shall continue the good work

The next day, a very excited Jai went to Ruchi and Chander.

No Jai, we will not copy anyone else's idea. This is our project, and we will conceptualise it and do it our way.

I agree with Chander. If we work together in harmony, I am sure that our project can be the best.

Soon the day arrived for submission of the project.

Good morning students. Time for final result!!!!

ETHICS: A WAY OF LIFE

- Ethics as a way of life is an integral part of success. Being ethical means that one is able to differentiate between what is right & what is wrong.
- One needs to be ethical while dealing with issues at all levels and not compromising for personal gains whatsoever.
- Following ethical behaviour is to lead by example.
- When one incorporates ethical behaviour in day-to-day life, it forms the very core of a person's being.
- Higher the ethical standards, lesser is the confusion in decision making.
- It is needless to say that ethical behaviour is one of the effective tools to combat corruption.
- Each person with ethics contributes to the growth of the organisation, society, country & above all the mankind.
